

Drinking Water Regulations Policy

Background

The water regulations have been NOTO's foremost issue since approximately late 2003. The problems with the regulations have been numerous and stem from the MOE's fundamentally flawed approach to the issue. From the beginning the MOE's focus has been to avoid any liability, download responsibility, and avoid any government expense. This approach has resulted in regulations, which avoid ensuring public safety while making water treatment extremely expensive for our industry and rural Ontario.

Policy

“That NOTO advocate for Ontario drinking water regulations which insure public safety, and are practical and economical to implement.”

Adopted by the NOTO Board of Directors November 24, 2004
